THE GOOD MAN OF NANKING

"A pure, authentic, firsthand account of what happened. . . . In this book of [Rabe's] diaries you are there, living through and experiencing this human tragedy."
—The Washington Post

"By all accounts, Rabe outdid Schindler. . . . [His] diaries, in this smooth and literary translation by John E. Woods, paint a Guernica-like portrait of a city waiting to be ripped apart, its inhabitants treated to some of the most brutal behavior in history."
—St. Louis Post-Dispatch

"A testament of truly remarkable fortitude and charity by one man . . . it restores faith in humanity."
—Times Literary Supplement

"These diaries prove . . . that Rabe was the 'Oskar Schindler of China'. . . . We ought not forget the horrors of Nanking, yet readers of Rabe's moving diaries will certainly remember the courageous individuals who opposed such horrors."
—The Denver Post

"A document of great historical value, revealing new facts and unusual detail. . . . A no-holds-barred look at the atrocities of war."
—Rocky Mountain News

"Superb, daily ground-level reportage of the taking of Nanking. . . . The great humanity of this man who saved hundreds of thousands of lives breathes on every page."
—Seattle Times/Post-Intelligencer

"Rabe has bequeathed to us an invaluable historical account and moral lesson. . . . His unadorned, modestly told tale is one of evil and good. It is a reminder to every person of each individual's capacity and responsibility to act when confronting evil and injustice."
—Daniel J. Goldhagen, author of Hitler's Willing Executioners

"This plainspoken diary of a remarkable German businessman makes vivid the horrors of the Japanese conquest of Nanking. . . . [Rabe] tells it all in a straightforward manner, with great modesty and compassion."
—Foreign Affairs

"One of the most important contemporaneous documents of the massacre, if not the single most important. . . . Rabe's diary testifies to the depths of human cruelty in a way that other history books can't. But it also reminds us about the goodness in every person."
—Los Angeles Times

The Diaries of John Rabe

ABOUT THE AUTHOR

John Rabe was born in Hamburg in 1882. He lived in China from 1908 to 1938, where his last position was that of director of the Siemens office in Nanking. He died impoverished and unrecognized in Berlin in 1949.

ABOUT THE EDITOR

Dr. Erwin Wickert, noted scholar and German ambassador to China from 1976 to 1980, first met Rabe in 1936 in Nanking. He is the author of several books about East Asia, including the bestselling China Seen from the Inside.

ABOUT THE TRANSLATOR

John E. Woods is the distinguished translator of many books—most notably Arno Schmidt's Evening Edged in Gold, for which he won both the American Book Award for translation and the PEN Translation Prize in 1981; Patrick Süskind's Perfume, for which he again won the PEN Translation Prize in 1987; and Thomas Mann's Doctor Faustus, Buddenbrooks, and The Magic Mountain, for which latter novel, together with Arno Schmidt's Nobodaddy's Children, he was presented in 1996 with the first Helen and Kurt Wolff Prize for Translation from the German. Mr. Woods lives in San Diego, California.
